1. Please check the spelling of "Hydroxyalkl (hydroxyalkyl?)" in claims 1 and 11.

2. Claim 40 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. This claim is indefinite since it does not provide a temperature at which the recited viscosity range occurs.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claim 41 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Curtis as set forth in the previous Office action. It is submitted that the rotary metal screen disclosed by Curtis at column 4 lines 14-24 serves as a type of nozzle for releasing a printable composition onto a substrate and Curtis certainly discloses the capability of printing a pattern at least at column 4, line 19.

5. Claim 40 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Curtis as applied to claim 41 above, and further in view of Osuna et al. (5,968,606). Osuna et al. teach at column 2, lines 53-55 that a printable composition should display a viscosity within the range claimed in claim 40. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the use of a composition having a viscosity within the range taught by Osuna et al. since Osuna et al. teach that such is appropriate for screen printing.

6. Claims 1-7, 9-18 and 20-21 are allowed.

7. Applicant's arguments filed March 8, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's arguments concerning a system with a nozzle are addressed above and the argument with regard to viscosity is considered to be moot based on the revised ground of rejection introduced in this Office action.
